

Pres. Lee reviews judicial candidates

By BRITTA C. JAFKE
Universe Staff Writer

President Rex E. Lee has begun active duty as chair of the American Bar Association's Judicial Evaluation Committee which is preparing an assessment report on U.S. Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter.

President Lee and 10 other lawyers from across the nation, including Richard J. Wilkins, a professor of the J. Reuben Clark Law School, were appointed to the reading committee last September by Ralph I. Lancaster, Jr., chair of the ABA Standing Committee on Federal Judiciary. All of the members of the committee have had extensive Supreme Court experience.

Lancaster said the purpose of the reading committee is to review writings and weigh professional competence of Supreme Court nominees, not to assess political or philosophical ideology.

"This committee looks solely at the legal content of the writings of nominees," Lancaster said.

Wilkins said the reading committee was not organized strictly to review Souter, but will review future nominees as well. Wilkins said he anticipates that over the next two years this committee will be used to fill vacancies of retiring judges.

"The standing committee looks into the integrity, life conduct, professional conduct and actions of nominees," Wilkins said. "The reading committee analyzes the nominee's legal work in order to determine the individual's professional judicial competence. We determine how good a scholar and a judge the nominee is."

Wilkins and the 10 other members of the committee are individually reviewing the 226 opinions and other legal writings that Souter submitted while serving on the New Hampshire Supreme Court.

Each member will submit individual reports to President Lee on Friday. President Lee will then prepare a recommendation for the standing committee that will be submitted Aug. 10. The evaluation submitted by President Lee will be used in Senate confirmation hearings in September, Wilkins said.

Lancaster said in the past, the standing committee has called upon one or two law schools to read the opinions of the nominee.

In September, the standing committee decided it would be better to have a standing national committee with a chair who would select committee members.

"President Lee was chosen to chair this committee because of his national reputation of scholarship, integrity and ability," Lancaster said. "He graciously agreed to put together this committee, which has done an outstanding job."

Education Week needs volunteers

By ROSEMARY WELLS
Universe Staff Writer

Volunteers are needed for Education Week, August 21-24, said the coordinator of Education Week.

"More than 450 volunteers are needed to be hosts and hostesses for more than 1,100 classes being offered throughout the week," Ellen Allred said.

Volunteers are assigned to classes to check student's tickets, help with registering, answer questions and help with instruction.

During Education Week 1989, volunteers helped more than 28,000 people find their way around campus. Between 25,000 and 28,000 are expected to attend this year," Allred said.

The Education Week staff consists of three year-round, full-time employees and some temporary, part-time help. But most of the workers during the week are volunteers and many are still needed, Allred said.

"Volunteers work in four-hour shifts. They work the same shift all week," she said. After their shift, volunteers are invited to attend classes at no charge.

Volunteers are an essential part of Education Week. Many return every year to help out. "We need their assistance for the program to run smoothly," Allred said. The majority of these volunteers are residents from the surrounding communities.

It's a satisfying experience for the volunteers, Allred said. "They (volunteers) get personal contact with people from all over the country and world," she said.

Paul and Mamie Hjorth of Springfield have been volunteers for the past six years.

"Volunteers are the backbone of the program. Other (universities) lack the support that BYU has and can't do a program of this sort," Mrs. Hjorth said.

"Each year I enjoy it a little more. It gives us an opportunity to assist others and to make Education Week a more enjoyable experience," she said.

One of her most memorable experiences is having seen people cry at the opportunity just to be able to attend.

She advises people who will attend to plan ahead. "Don't schedule a class at the Marriott Center and then one at the Wilkinson Center. Take an occasional break and enjoy the surroundings."

Anyone interested in volunteering for Education Week may contact the Education Week office at 378-2087.

BYU will subsidize health insurance

By TRISHA E. WALLACE
Senior Reporter

After evaluating student's concerns about changes in the 1990-91 BYU Student Health Plan, the BYU President's Council has announced it will subsidize insurance premiums for "those students who have a pregnancy or other pre-existing condition, incurred while covered by the 1989-90 Student Health Plan," said R.J. Snow, vice president of Student Life, Wednesday.

According to a health plan adjustments chart released by the Council, Snow said students in one of three situations will see a decrease in their premiums if they had a pre-existing condition that meets the qualifications stipulated in the health plan.

Under the 1990-91 Health Plan, the regular premium for a married student couple with two or more children is $764. However, Snow said the premium for students with a pre-existing condition will be subsidized by BYU with the insured paying $600 and BYU paying $164.

The premium for a married student with one non-student dependent (spouse or child) with maternity coverage for the spouse is $904. But the premium for students that have incurred a pre-existing condition will only be $416 while BYU pays $488.

The premium for a married student with two or more non-student dependents (spouse or children) with maternity coverage for their spouse will be $1,112. But the premium for students with a pre-existing condition will be $624 with BYU also subsidizing this coverage with an additional $488.

Snow said the money needed for BYU to subsidize the premiums will come from "other university funds."

Students claiming a pre-existing condition on the 1990-91 plan must apply at the McDonald Health Center.

According to a statement released by the Council, the adjusted premiums are available only to those students and their dependents who, "(A) were previously covered under the 1989-90 BYU Student Health Plan, (B) whose premium payments for previous coverage are current, and (C) who have conceived a child but have not yet delivered, or who have had some other medical condition arise while covered under the 1989-90 plan."

The regular premiums as stated in the 1990-91 BYU Health plan will remain the same for all other students.

Students should apply in the health center after Aug. 6 and before Sept. 17, the due date for late tuition payment, said Snow. After a student has applied, the health center will grant a credit to the insured's semester premium.

Snow said the adjusted premium rates were decided after gathering information from students who gave input on the premiums in open forums July 23 and 25.

"The students were thorough in their efforts to present reasonable proposals, and while it will cost the university more than we would like, we want to recognize that effort if we can," he said.

"After doing a quick study of outside insurance agencies, we found that what the students wanted was pretty much in line with the outside," he said.

Snow said many students have expressed preference in an 80/20 percent coverage policy. However, he said in considering the cost of the policy, "the objective was to get the best policy at the best price."

It was felt by those who chose the 70/30 policy that "overall it was a better buy for campus," said Snow. "Many would be able to have coverage which was as good and would effect some savings as well."

Snow said that it was important for students to have a chance at reasonable health and to have a reasonable policy. "We don't want them to take some sort of cheapie policy."

BYUSA President Brett Blake said, "For students who still have concerns, BYUSA will sponsor an insurance information fair next week."

"Experienced insurance agents will be on campus to educate them (students) about what to look for in an insurance policy," he said.

The idea of a health insurance policy is to allow students access to good medical care, Snow said. Many students have had to leave the university or draw on the resources of city government or church welfare when medical expenses exceeded their expectations, he said.

Agent explains the necessity of insurance; offers advice on choosing the best policy

By CHARLES D. IRWIN
Universe Staff Writer

The search for a health insurance policy is not an easy task, but any policy is better than self insurance, said a local insurance agent.

"It is foolish for students to think they can self-insure themselves by putting the money that used for health insurance premiums into the bank," said David S. Ige, an agent for New York Life Insurance.

"They may have saved $1,000, but a single major-medical expense will wipe their savings out."

Ige said there are principally four types of health insurance policies available to choose from. They are major-medical, base plus major-medical, health maintenance organization and cost saver.

An article in the August 1990 issue of Consumer Reports states most insurance companies write "co-insurance policies." This means insurance companies pay only a portion of the bill, and the policy holder pays the balance, the article said.

"Most major-medical policies pay 80 percent of eligible expenses, leaving policyholders to pay the remaining 20 percent plus that part of the cost not covered (by the policy)," the article states.

Most major-medical policies have a deductible followed by a coverage or co-insurance, like 80/20 coverage, up to a certain limit. After that limit the policy covers 100 percent, Ige said.

A base plus major-medical policy pays 100 percent up to a specified limit, then it follows the major medical policy of a deductible, coverage to a limit and then 100 percent coverage, Ige said. The health maintenance organization generally gives different coverages for inpatient and outpatient services. Inpatient services are covered like the major-medical policy. For outpatient services policyholders pay a copayment, usually $5 to $10, for services such as physical exams, dental check-ups, etc., Ige said.

The cost saver plan is similar to the health maintenance organization (HMO) policy. However, the outpatient benefits are less while the inpatient benefits differ in that the co-insurance is normally a 70/30 split, Ige said.

Ige said the cost saver policy is generally the most inexpensive, but policy holders should be in excellent health because of the lack of coverage in some areas. The major-medical policy is for people in good health and is the next inexpensive, he said.

The health maintenance organization is best for families. If you have four kids that need physicals, the cost is only $20, Ige said. While the cost of HMO policies is the third most inexpensive, the cost of HMOs is on the rise. Also, not all HMOs offer individual policies, he said.

The most expensive policy is the base plus major-medical. Because of the extended coverage this policy is best suited for the person who is chronically ill, Ige said. "An inexpensive policy doesn't mean you are covered," said Doug Weber, insurance agent.

ber, also an agent for New York Life Insurance. "Inexpensive premiums could have a coverage limitation."

A Preferred Provider Organization policy is a group of providers signed up by the insurance company, said Patsy Olson, manager of the Provo office of Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Utah.

The provider agrees to accept a lower charge for each of his services, Olson said. In return the insurance company agrees to sign up large groups of people for the policy.

To help answer students' questions about health insurance, New York Life Insurance will be offering a free health insurance seminar tonight at 7 p.m. "We will not be pushing our product."

"We just want to answer any questions the students may have," Ige said. Students can call Pat at 373-5926 for more information.

After 6 days, 20 deaths, coup leader surrenders

Associated Press

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad — Dozens of Moslem militants surrendered Wednesday and began freeing the 42 hostages they seized six days ago in a bloody coup attempt, the government said.

The attempted coup, which reportedly left at least 20 people dead, began Friday when armed rebels stormed the state television station and the Parliament building, seizing top government officials and other captives.

The coup leader, Abu Bakr, had demanded the resignation of Prime Minister Arthur N.R. Robinson, who was among those held hostage. Robinson was freed Tuesday after offering to step down and agreeing to early elections.

Bakr blamed Robinson for widespread poverty in the Caribbean nation of 1.3 million people, a former British colony. Witnesses said Bakr was among the rebels who surrendered at the television station, where the first group of hostages was freed.

Government spokesman Gregory Shaw said he believed the militants' surrender was unconditional, but details of the agreement were not immediately available.

The 25 captives at the TV station were all station employees. The remaining 17 hostages at the Parliament building, including seven Cabinet ministers, were expected to be released shortly but it was "going to be slow," Shaw said.

In a live broadcast, state radio described the haggard-looking captives filing out of the television station, one by one.

Soldiers searched each one in the middle of the street, because the militants had claimed at one point to have wired the captives with explosives and threatened to blow them up.

Soviet rivals join forces to aid economy

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev and his main political rival, Boris N. Yeltsin, have formed a joint committee to reinvigorate the Soviet economy, in a move that Gorbachev is willing to remove faster toward market reforms.

The 12-member committee, which held its first meeting Wednesday, brought together moderate reformers loyal to Gorbachev and more radical reformers supporting Yeltsin, the president of the huge Russian republic who recently quit Gorbachev's Communist Party.

Rapid reform of the Soviet economy also could increase the chances for obtaining Western aid, which Gorbachev says is necessary to reform the economy.

Over Gorbachev's objections, Yeltsin was elected in May to head Russia. He has shown tolerance toward private property and in recent weeks indicated he intends to radically reform land ownership and seize control of banking.

That brought a sharp response from Gorbachev, who on Sunday charged all of the Soviet republics not to try to break away from the central money and banking system.

Budget talks wait as negotiators fail to agree on cuts

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush and congressional budget negotiators appeared to abandon hope Wednesday of reaching a deficit-cutting agreement before fall, setting the stage for election-season finger-pointing over which side is to blame.

Republicans suggested Bush would make a political issue of Democratic refusal to offer detailed proposals for tax increases and spending cuts.

But House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., countered, "We didn't pledge that every time the Republicans slit their wrists that we would slit ours."

He referred to an administration plan — criticized even by Republicans — that includes higher taxes on alcohol and a limit on deductibility of state tax payments.

White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk said Bush, in a meeting with House and Senate Republicans, "expressed his concerns, frustration ... that the Democrats have not been able to come up with a plan, or details, that meet the ones the Republicans have already put together and are willing to put on the table."

Bush plans to verbally attack Democrats during Congress' August recess and to veto spending bills he considers too expensive, thus leaving potentially huge automatic spending cuts in place this fall until a budget deal is reached, according to White House officials and Republican lawmakers who met with the president Wednesday.

Bush is "certainly not going to keep his trap shut all during August," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

Administration officials expressed optimism that the bargaining will succeed after Congress' month-long recess.

ter Memorial Lounge, she said. "Representatives from different insurance agencies will demonstrate their products and explain the benefits from their agencies."

The purpose of the fair is to allow students to explore alternative options to the BYU 1990-91 Health Plan, Mike Rodenberg, executive director of programming at BYUSA said. It is geared toward married students since they are the ones most adversely affected by the plan, he said.

Some information seminars will be given by Deseret Mutual, which provides the BYU health plans. DMBA will explain its policy and benefits as well as the changes in the 1989-90 BYU health plan, Yager said.

There will also be educational seminars, said Yager. "(Students) will be given an opportunity to know what to look for in different policies. We don't want students to sign up for a policy that doesn't have the benefits that BYU students are required to have," she said.

Iraq attacks Kuwait border in oil war

WASHINGTON — Iraqi troops have launched an offensive against Kuwait, the Kuwaiti embassy said Wednesday night.

Faleh Bader, director of the ambassador's office, said, "We confirm there is an offensive at Kuwait border and we have no comment."

The attack started about midnight, Kuwaiti time (5 p.m. EDT), Bader said. Earlier in the day, the Iraqi ambassador was summoned to the State Department for a meeting with Assistant Secretary John Kelly.

Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Kelly repeated to the Iraqi envoy the U.S. desire for a peaceful solution to the tensions with Kuwait and urged Iraq to respect to sovereignty of all nations in the region.

Kelly told a House subcommittee Tuesday that while the United States has no treaty obligations that would mandate military support for Kuwait, the United States does believe strongly in respect for territories of all states in the region.

Iraq had moved about 100,000 troops to its border with Kuwait after claiming that Kuwait's production of oil beyond quotas of the OPEC cartel had depressed the world price.

CUP gets House committee approval

WASHINGTON — The House Interior Committee Wednesday endorsed a $680 million authorization bill to complete the Central Utah Project, a $2 billion water collection project in its third decade of construction.

The bill, crafted in a rare alliance of the five-member Utah congressional delegation, would authorize Congress to appropriate the funding to the giant project, possibly by 1997.

Rep. Wayne Owens, the sole Democrat in the delegation, said his Republican colleagues, water users, environmentalists and sportsmen had engaged in "nonstop" negotiations in forging "the most far-reaching water conservation plan in the country ... and this in the second-most arid state in the nation."

"I'd like to say, if I could, how totally in unity the delegation worked on this bill, and for basically 2½ years," Owens said at a news conference following the vote.

The committee reported out the bill on a voice vote and referred it to the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries due to a minor concern about an in-stream flow agreement, said Millard Wyatt of Sen. Orrin Hatch's staff.

If that committee signs off, the bill could reach the House floor in September and then the Senate, he said. If passed, sponsors will begin making funding requests during the 1991 appropriation cycle.

Government to unload S&Ls in auction

WASHINGTON — The savings and loan bailout agency on Wednesday announced its "great fall inventory clearance sale" to unload $50 billion in assets from failed thrifts by the end of the year.

The sales push marks the second phase of the Resolution Trust Corp.'s cleanup effort. In the first phase, dubbed "Operation Clean Sweep," the agency concentrated on selling the failed institutions.

But it ended up keeping a large share of the failed thrifts' sour loans, problem real estate, junk bonds and other assets.

Phase 2—dubbed by L. William Seidman, chairman of the Resolution Trust Corp., the "great fall inventory clearance sale"—is aimed at whittling the Resolution Trust's inventory. Sales proceeds will offset what the agency has spent to pay off depositors or to entice private investors into taking over insolvent institutions.

Among the sales techniques employed will be an international satellite auction of 71 major properties, "bulk sales" of packages of similar properties and the use of 15 special sales offices.

Convicted mercy killer given clemency

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — An 81-year-old man convicted in the "mercy killing" of his wife will be freed from prison Thursday for humanitarian reasons, Gov. Bob Martinez said Wednesday.

Roswell Gilbert, whose case focused national attention on the killing of an ailing loved one, suffers from lung and heart disease and physicians say he could die at any time.

"I think it's in the best interest of all parties concerned," said Martinez, a law-and-order Republican who has signed more than 120 death warrants since taking office in 1987 and previously opposed clemency for Gilbert.

The retired engineer was the subject of a 1987 television movie that dramatized his decision in 1985 to kill his wife of 51 years. She suffered from Alzheimer's disease and osteoporosis.

"Mr. Gilbert's declining health, and the likelihood that his condition will continue to deteriorate if he remains in prison, leads me to the conclusion that he should be granted clemency," Martinez said.

Gilbert was sentenced to a mandatory minimum prison term of 25 years to life after being convicted of first-degree murder in the shooting death of his wife, Emily.

Mission president's wife still hospitalized

SALT LAKE CITY — The wife of a Zimbabwe Mormon mission president killed in a car accident last week remains in critical condition in a hospital in Johannesburg, South Africa, a church spokesman says.

Lillis Remington Brooks, 66, was critically injured when the vehicle she and her husband were riding in collided with a truck July 26 near Kwekwe, Zimbabwe.

George Thomas Brooks, 64, president of the Zimbabwe Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, died instantly in the accident.

Mrs. Brooks originally was hospitalized in Harare with spinal injuries. "Yesterday they flew her to Johannesburg," spokesman Don LeFevre said Wednesday. "I can only assume they have better facilities there for treatment of her problem," LeFevre said.

The Brooks are from Bountiful. They have four children.

BYU scholarships pay tuition bills

By BRITTA C. JAFEK
Universe Staff Writer

BYU awards more academic scholarships than most universities of similar composition, said the director of Financial Aid.

"The majority of universities with similar situations to BYU award most of their scholarships on a need basis," said Ford L. Stevenson. "BYU awards 80 percent of its scholarships on an academic basis, with 20 percent of the scholarships awarded on a combination of academic and need basis."

Stevenson said BYU awards about 7,000 scholarships every year, not including athletic scholarships.

Pat Conroy, athletic secretary for Men's Intercollegiate Athletics, said 90 scholarships are awarded each year for football and 15 for basketball. Scholarships for other sports are awarded on an equivalency basis which means, "... the number of scholarships that are awarded ... varies from year to year, with dollar amounts for each award varying as well," Conroy said.

Karen Marshall, athletic secretary for Women's Intercollegiate Athletics, said most scholarships for women's sports are awarded on an equivalency basis. However, gymnastics offers 10, volleyball 12 and basketball 10 to 12 scholarships annually.

Paul H. Thompson, vice president of Development and University Relations, said intercollegiate athletes receive grants and financial aid from the athletic budget.

"Most of the money for these scholarships comes from football and basketball revenues, with additional money coming from broadcasting revenues and some financial support coming from the Cougar Club," Thompson said.

Money for non-athletic scholarships comes from university resources, LDS Church funds and private funds, Stevenson said.

Dollar amounts for BYU scholarships vary from $200 to $2,850, Stevenson said. The largest scholarship BYU awards is the Ezra Taft Benson Award which is awarded every year based on student's ACT scores, grade point averages, faculty reviews and personal evaluations.

Jeffrey M. Tanner, assistant dean of Records and Admissions, said BYU doesn't require written essays for most scholarships because students' high school performance is usually indicative of how they will perform in college.

"When college transcripts arrive, we re-evaluate them, looking closely at what preparatory college classes have been taken," Tanner said. "We feel that the students who are best prepared for college should be awarded based on their grades and performance in high school, not on an essay."

Lehi Foundation helps Native Americans

By VERNON LYLE HEPER
Universe Staff Writer

Bob Hope, Steve Young, Gov. Norman Bangerter and Johnny Miller are a few of the celebrities that gather annually to support the Lehi Foundation in its Pro-Am fund-raising golf tournament at Jeremy Ranch.

This year the celebrities helped to raise more than $100,000 for the Lehi Foundation, said Dale Tingey, foundation director for Provo.

Tingey said the funds are used to provide scholarships for students attending colleges and universities locally and nationally. In addition, the money is used to promote seminars and workshops for Native Americans on leadership, management and self-esteem. The foundation's involvement in community affairs does not stop there, however.

The foundation is also actively involved in health care programs for Native American people on a national and international level, Tingey said.

Tingey assumed his position with the Lehi Foundation after he retired as director of the American Indian Services at BYU. He has more than 30 years of experience interacting and building strong bonds with Indian people throughout the United States and Canada.

In 1968 Tingey served as mission president for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Southwestern Indian Mission.

Tingey is optimistic about the growth and future of the Lehi Foundation. "I am excited about having the organization grow and expand its services to many of the Indian tribes that we have not reached yet," Tingey said.

He said the foundation encourages individuals to become self-sufficient. "The foundation provides no full tuition scholarships because we feel that the individual must provide at least half or more of his or her financial needs. We feel that these scholarships are the best way to help young people prepare to make a contribution in society and also provide for their own financial security."

Maxine Etter, a 26-year-old senior from Crown Point, N.M., majoring in elementary education, is a recipient of a Lehi Foundation's scholarship. She said, "The Foundation's scholarship is helping me to progress toward my bachelor's degree."

After graduation, Etter will return to the Navajo reservation to teach elementary school for a year. She then plans to return to begin a master's program in education administration.

"I am grateful for the opportunities afforded me through this scholarship," Etter said.

Elder Oaks fireside topic to be 'sin and suffering'

By SAORI PETZINGER

Elder Dallin H. Oaks, a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will speak at the BYU 18-Stake Fireside Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center.

The topic of his talk will be "sin and suffering," said Virginia Archer, Elder Oaks' secretary.

"Elder Oaks was president of BYU for nine years, so he knows the situation," said Jerry Williams, first counselor of the BYU 7th Stake.

"We are thrilled to have him back," Williams said.

Elder Oaks was president of BYU from 1971 to 1980. Previous to that call, he served as stake mission president for the Chicago Stake in 1961 and as second counselor in the presidency of the Chicago South Stake in 1963.

Elder Oaks was a justice of the Utah Supreme Court for three and one-half years before being called to the Council of the Twelve in 1984.

Elder Oaks will preside at the fireside, Alan Wilkins, president of ences. Actress Dana Delany of "China Beach" and actor Louis Gossett Jr. will help announce this year's prime-time Emmy nominees during a news conference today.

Because "The Simpsons" is animated, it must compete in the category of "outstanding animated program of one hour or less," said John Leverence, the academy's award director.

There are no categories for actors and actresses who provide the voices for animated prime-time shows, Leverence said.

'Steel Magnolias' shows strength of women

By LINDA LINFIELD
Universe Staff Writer

The director of "Steel Magnolias" said he feels fortunate to be able to work with the talented ensemble of women now performing the play Tuesdays through Saturdays in the Pardoe Drama Theater, HFAC.

Director Ivan Crosland said, "I don't know when I've laughed so hard in a rehearsal. I wonder a little whether I'm directing this show or just laughing through it."

The play's strongest theme is the strength of women, said Crosland. It is about five individualistic women who function in society without trying to change each other. The women confront their prejudices and accept people for what they are.

This production of "Steel Magnolias" comes on the heels of the Dolly Parton/Sally Field hit movie by the same title.

Crosland said he does not expect the popularity of the film to detract from the play's success.

"The play stays focused on the characters. There are no distractions of movie effects," he said.

The challenge for the actresses has been to find the characters within themselves — not copy what they have seen, said Crosland. They have had to find the soul of their characters.

Daily rehearsals began the second week of June, and except for a few breaks during finals and on Sundays, continued until the day before opening night, said Crosland. The time commitment was hard because each person is involved in so many other things.

Crosland said the play has been fun because of the strong cast. Of the five actresses, three are currently BYU students and one intends to enroll soon, he said.

Production stage manager Laurie Smith said the up-to-date costuming for "Steel Magnolias" was not as easy as it seems. Since the setting is current, wardrobe closets were useless.

Outfitting the stylish Southern women cost more money than is usually spent in plays, said Smith. Although the actresses wear some of their own clothes, some new things had to be purchased.

The play's realistic scenery was constructed by skilled carpenters at the BYU scene shop, said Crosland. Lee Walker invented the vacuum process that was used to create the molded house siding.

In former days a similar effect would have been achieved by painting cloth screens.

Anne VanKampen, of the HFAC Ticket Office, said tickets are still available for all performances. She suggested buying tickets early and said Fridays are the busiest days.

"Steel Magnolias" runs Tuesdays through Saturdays beginning at 7:30 p.m. through Aug. 11, with a matinee Aug. 6 at 4 p.m.

The play returns for Education Week, and no student cards will be accepted at that time.

World renowned instructors featured in dance workshop

By ALLISON M. HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

World renowned dancers are instructing a record number of participants during the BYU Ballroom Dance Camp, the camp director said.

David Sycamore and Denise Weavers, International Ballroom Ten Dance Champions, are joining eight other teachers in this ninth annual workshop.

"We're excited about the teachers," said Lee Wakefield, camp organizer.

"(Sycamore and Weavers) are one of the very top couples in dance and have been for some time."

Wakefield said the BYU Ballroom Dance Company's reputation makes it easier to bring top performers and instructors to campus.

About 400 people are expected to participate in the camp.

"This is our largest enrollment ever," said Wakefield.

The camp, which is open to ages 14 and up, attracts a wide age spectrum. "Most of the people are 20 to 30-years-old, but we also have some who are older," Wakefield said.

The students dance for about seven hours a day.

They receive instruction in the fox-trot, waltz, rumba, paso doble, West Coast swing, jive swing," said Wakefield.

The camp began Monday and continues through Aug. 3.

In addition to the adult camp, a youth camp was held last week.

Marci Edgington, assistant director, said most of the youth attended because their parents wanted them to learn social skills that aren't taught very often.

Along with traditional ballroom dances the youth program featured instruction in breakdancing and freestyle dance, said assistant director Claudia Hill.

International dancers gather in So. Utah Festival unites cultures

By ALLISON M. HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

Dancers from the Soviet Union, Mexico, Yugoslavia and Austria will converge at Brian Head and Cedar City to participate in the Children's International Folk Festival.

The festival, which is in its second year, is the only children's dance festival of its kind in the United States, said Nancy Dalton, promotion director.

LaRee Garfield from the Iron County Tourism and Convention Bureau said the festival is of the quality that it can compete with similar folk dance festivals in Europe.

"It has received nothing but praise," said Garfield.

In addition to the international groups, the dance festival will feature two Native American and three local children's dance groups.

"We use local talent because part of the festival is sharing our culture with the other children," said Kristeen Harrington, festival director. Harrington said the Native American groups are popular because the children come to the United States expecting to see cowboys and Indians.

The festival was able to get the dance groups from the Soviet Union because of its affiliation with the International Organization of Folk Arts.

Harrington, who is a six-year member of the executive board of the organization, said the group is committed to preserving various aspects of culture throughout the world. She said 104 countries have membership in the organization.

Alexander Veigl, general secretary of the organization, will be an honored guest at the festival, Harrington said.

Dalton said the four-day festival will feature four evening gala performances and one matinee performance, all held at Brian Head. Each group will perform six to 12 different routines and put on a different show for each performance.

The dance groups will also hold workshops in Cedar City and Parowan. Members of the public will be taught basic steps to dances from each participating troupe. Dalton said last year's workshops were successful. "They were packed."

The festival is sponsored by Iron County and the town of Brian Head. Garfield said the festival adds to the county's tourist attractions. "It's something different, but it's still a festival."

"I believe it complements the Shakespeare festival," she said.

Garfield said the county has made a three-year commitment to the festival, but hopes to get grants from arts organization and local sponsorship. "A quality festival needs additional financial support."

The festival has been a unifying element in Iron County, said Garfield. "It is the one thing that has caused our county to work together in other things."

The festival runs through Saturday.

Tickets and information are available from the Iron County Tourism and Convention Bureau.

Red rock photography on exhibit at museum

By ALEXANDRA CORTEZ
Universe Staff Writer

The mystery of the Southern Utah Red Rock country is brought to life in an exhibit on display at the Springville Art Museum.

The exhibit is a collection of about 20 works by scenic photographer David Pettit and will hang in the museum's "Works on Paper" gallery.

Due to the cibachrome process the colors of purple, red, and orange burst out in the scenic photos of the Southern Utah landscapes of Zion's National Park, Glen Canyon, Escalante Canyon, and other Southwest communities.

"The cibachrome process tends to deepen the color contrast," said Pettit. "The color is there, but it really comes out through the processing".

A composition on exhibit called "Windswept Butte" shows how the process captures the color, showing every line and every possible color in the rock against the blue sky of Southern Utah.

"It's beautiful," said Lila Larsen, assistant director of the museum.

Pettit studied illustration and design in school and studied classic portraiture with Don Busath at the Salt Lake Art Center.

After marrying, he moved to Springdale, Utah in 1980. "That's what got me into landscape," Pettit said.

According to Pettit the key to capturing landscapes the way he does is finding something with good composition and design that will give the image some movement.

"I go around studying the landscape and finding things that I think I should shoot."

After discovering the Narrows, Pettit spent almost two years hiking, and climbing in and out of the area looking for the right spot and waiting for the right season to get the sun to kick in light the way he wanted.

"He goes through a lot of work to get his pictures," said Wally Harding, Pettit's brother-in-law. "It's dangerous what he does, but his work always amazes me."

Many of his works are for sale including a poster of the Narrows, available at the museum.

Pettit is the recipient of various awards including the Purchase

Award given by Southern Utah State College's Invitational Art Exhibition in 1988 and Best Show, Best Landscape at Dixie College's Photographic Exhibit.

Pettit has shown his work at the University of Utah, the Nora Eccles Harrison Museum at Utah State and the Nicolayson Museum in Casper, Wyo.

I didn't know beans about carats.

Problem is, most diamond salespeople don't either. That's why my fiancé and I were glad we stopped in at Wilson Diamonds. They were knowledgeable, polite and taught us how to recognize quality and price.

After all our comparing (including those "wholesale" deals) we bought at Wilson's.

I understand why Wilson's has been around longer than anyone. I think most smart people buy there.

Folkfest dancers are on steady ground Stage to hold 400 performers

By STEVE DIXON
Universe Staff Writer

What holds 400 dancers and musicians, takes two weeks to build, and will be ready for use in Springville on Saturday? The stage where participants in Springville's World Folkfest will perform.

Construction began July 23 on the facilities, including the stage that will be used for Springville's annual event, said Teddy Anderson, co-chairperson of the folkfest.

The World Folkfest is an annual event which includes performers from at least 10 countries, including Sweden, Israel, France and others.

Five years ago organizers of the folkfest approached carpenter Morrell Dean and asked him to design and build a stage which could support up to 400 dancers and musicians. They also said the stage "could not move or vibrate" as the dancers performed.

Dean filled the order. The stage is built with supports under every one half sheet of plywood. Anderson said it's an amazing set up.

Other facilities to be built during the two week construction period include a 50-foot-wide and 30-foot-high light tower, a speaker tower and several food booths.

Utah National Guard based in Springville has participated every year in the construction of the facilities. Sgt. Robert Lloyd, Springville's National Guardsman, said this year the Guard will provide tents to serve as the participants' rest area/costume storage units during the performances. The Guard will also help erect bleachers and supply water to the tents.

The whole project is a combined effort of many people, Anderson said. The National Guard really deserves a lot of credit for its participation, she said. "They've helped immensely by donating time and equipment."

The Guard provides troop carriers to transport the performers from the parade, which is held in downtown Springville, to the site of the performance just behind Springville High School.

Anderson said the performers usually love the ride. However, a group of Russian dancers at first were reluctant to board a troop carrier. "After returning to Russia, the dancers told their friends that they had been in a troop truck in Springville. They loved it," she said.

World Folkfest runs from Saturday to Aug. 11. Tickets for the event are available at the World Folkfest office in Springville, or call 489-3657.

Members of a New Zealand dance troupe perform a native dance. The troupe, along with dancers from 11 other countries, will perform at the World Folkfest Aug. 4-11 in Springville.

Dancers to converge on Springville for the fifth annual World Folkfest

By ALLISON M. HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

Four-hundred dancers and musicians from around the world will make their home in Springville during the 1990 World Folkfest, said the event's general director.

Sara Newman said the fifth annual event will feature folk dance groups representing Finland, Sweden, Belgium, France, Mexico, Indonesia, Malaysia, Italy, New Zealand, Turkey, Israel and the United States.

Although up to 21 groups have performed in past festivals, Colleen Drollinger, a fest board member, said the festival likes to keep a 12-country average.

"By limiting the number of groups, it gives more performance time to each of the dance troupes."

The groups will perform nightly for a total of six performances, Newman said. In addition to performances, the festival will feature folk parades, traditional costumes and an open-air dance with the public. The groups will also perform in University Mall.

Newman said the folk parade, a traditional part of most international festivals, is just starting to catch on. "It's been slow in starting, but it's getting better."

Despite its young age, the World Folkfest has received top ratings from the International Organization of Folk Arts.

The festival's reputation of quality and its affiliation with the world organization have enabled it to feature top groups from around the world, Newman said.

"Because they're so good, the groups can pick and choose which festivals they will attend, but they're beating down our door, trying to do this one."

Newman said the Springville fest also has special appeal because of its location. "There aren't many folk festivals in the Western part of the country. The dancers are excited to see the American West."

Community support for the festival has grown over the five years of the festival. Newman said there were more volunteers for host families than there were dancers.

Newman said the festival helps increase intercultural understanding. "It has exposed (people in the community) to people of different races, different religions and different political backgrounds, but they realize we're basically all the same."

The World Folkfest opens Saturday with a folk parade and continues through Aug. 11.

Student Advisory Council speaks out for student body

By RACHELLE W. WOOLLEY
University Staff Writer

The BYUSA Student Advisory Council provides students an opportunity to voice their opinions, the co-ordinator of Student Leadership Development said.

"The purpose of Student Advisory Council is to collect input on issues of importance to the university, and to give students a formalized avenue for voicing opinions in a way that can be easily accepted and respected by university administration," David M. R. Lucero said.

Lanny Brown, president of Student Advisory Council, said their goal is to be wise counselors and philosophical advisers to the university.

"We're not here to make decisions on what's right and wrong or what's important and not important. We're here to help funnel student views into the proper channels at the university," Brown said.

Steve Wilkinson, the associated vice president of involvement, said, "Some students think that BYUSA is a government, but we aren't. We have no legislative mechanism to make policies in administrative areas of this university.

"But we do have the Student Advisory Council, which is the student's voice to the administration," Wilkinson said.

son said.

The BYU Student Service Association charter states the council gathers opinions through discussion of ideas, opinion surveys and other means. After collecting information, the council discusses the problem until a recommendation is sent to university personnel that can take action.

Joseph Kerry, administrative director of the council, said the council tries to be the voice of the students. "We try to sponsor activities that elicit feelings and thoughts from students so we can get an understanding of what their needs are," he said.

Lucero said the council has helped bring about changes including two new courtesy phones to be placed in the W. W. Clyde Engineering Building and the Jesse Knight Humanities Building, and faculty data information in the Reserve Library.

The council has been organized for three years, Brown said. Of its 36 members, 12 are elected by college student councils and approved by the deans, another 12 are elected from the colleges, nine are elected or appointed from campus organizations and three are appointed at large.

In an effort to involve more students, the council has been divided into two groups: Involvement and Leadership Training.

BYUSA President Brett Blake said, "We believe that an important part of BYUSA is to use our activities to prepare students to be leaders both in the local communities and society."

Park concerts bring crowds, fun

By SHAUN STAHELE

Provo residents haven't forgotten their pioneer past, at least not when it comes to having fun with music.

For 18 years, Dr. Ralph Laycock, former music department chair at BYU and renowned musician, has directed an orchestra composed of the valley's top professional musicians in a series of Sunday evening concerts under the trees at Provo Park.

"The kids love coming to hear the music," said Kevin and Maile Merrill as they threw out a blanket for their two toddlers.

"It's one of the things we enjoy most about spending summer in Provo," said Mr. and Mrs. Stan Russ, a retired couple from Arizona who come to Provo to avoid the heat in Phoenix.

Fashioned after the Boston Pops Orchestra, the Provo Municipal Orchestra plays popular selections of well-known music. One evening, the band opened with Beethoven's "Egmont Overture," followed with some foot-stomping tunes from Lerner and Loewe and then got the crowd clapping with "Pop Goes the Weasel."

"We play the whole gamut," said Laycock. "We want everyone to feel that 'this is my kind of music.'"

He said, "It is a real challenge for me to stand in front of such good musicians. They aren't paid enough for what they play. They play because it is fun. Many are glad just for the opportunity to play."

"Dr. Laycock cracks the whip, but that's what makes it fun," said Gene Furniss, a clarinet player who is also a junior high school band teacher.

On any Sunday evening, several thousand people fill the park and sway to the music. "People are kind and loyal," Laycock said. "I believe some people haven't missed a concert in 10 years."

The orchestra, which is sponsored by Provo City and the Musicians Performance Trust Fund, concludes its summer schedule on Sunday with a 7:30 p.m. concert at Provo Park.

President's Council eager to fill administrative slots

By MICHELLE BURNETT
Senior Reporter

BYU's President's Council is in the process of filling several major administrative positions, but final decisions have not yet been made, said Ronald G. Hyde, executive assistant to the president.

The chief vacancy to be filled is Vice President of Development and University Relations, a position held by newly appointed Weber State University President Paul H. Thompson.

Another position needing a replacement is Dean of Admissions and Records, formerly held by Robert W. Spencer, who has joined BYU's College of Education.

The President's Council is also looking to appoint a new Assistant Administrative Vice President over Personnel — a position previously held by Warren R. Nielsen, who has accepted a position as chair of the Management and Quantitative Methods Department at Illinois State University.

Also, the President's Council is searching for a "university official" over information systems, a position formerly held by new associate professor of information management Lynn E. McClurg.

Hyde said some of the positions will be filled sooner than others, and as soon as the President's Council gets them cleared through the Board of Trustees, the announcements will be made.

"We're fairly near closure on some of these," Hyde said. "They are all moving along, and we're anxious to get them filled."

Depression among infants a real problem, doctor says

By SAORI PETZINGER
Universe Staff Writer

Infants who exhibit signs of nervous depression are becoming increasingly common, said a doctor at the Tokyo Mitaka Health Center.

Yasuhide Nakamura said the main symptoms of nervous depression are infants stop crying when left alone, they don't smile, they don't show interest in their own parents' faces and they stop gaining weight.

Infants who show symptoms of nervous depression or psychosomatic abnormality don't have any mental deficiencies, said Hisako Watanabe, psychiatrist of Yokohama Municipal Hospital.

"Emotional abnormality of a baby appears because of the baby's distrust of its mother," Watanabe said.

A few weeks after birth, an infant is able to interpret the tones of a mother's voice and can understand the looks in a mother's eyes.

The way a mother talks to her baby and how she holds her baby significantly affect the baby's emotions, Watanabe said.

"Most mothers think that they are taking good care of their babies, however, the babies are extremely sensitive to their mother's distress. Infants have no mental immunity against their mother's feelings," Watanabe said.

Orton, Harmer schedule debates

By SEAN EDDY
Universe Staff Writer

Bill Orton and John Harmer, candidates for the 3rd Congressional District race, announced their debate schedule at a press conference Wednesday. Karl Snow, however, said he will not be participating unless the debates are arranged by third parties.

Snow, competing with Harmer for the Republican nomination, said since the victor in the Republican contest will have ample opportunity to debate Orton, the only Democrat in the race, "I see no advantage for either of us to provide Mr. Orton with a forum at this time."

Orton said he has personally invited Snow to participate in the debates. "The dates would be set to meet Karl's schedule, and I have offered to allow Karl to dictate the rules and the format of debates."

A news release sent by Snow to the press conference stated that Snow's campaign is currently working with four third-party groups in scheduling debates and joint appearances with Harmer.

The release also stated it is not Snow's responsibility to spotlight his opponent, who appears to have difficulty gaining a forum and a platform for issues other than those that continue to follow him from his past.

Harmer said, "I generally regret Mr. Snow not making a showing. The debates are not endorsements to candidacy, but where the candidate stands on the issues."

"Part of the advantage of these debates is that the people will have the opportunity to ask questions of the candidates."

Snow and Harmer are scheduling debates through the League of Women Voters, the Liberty Mint and one or two television stations.

There will be several debates between Orton and Harmer, and each debate will be 45 minutes covering one topic.

Orem hospital's safety fair to feature hands-on events

By MONICA HESS
Universe Staff Writer

Free information, activities and displays about safety are featured at the 3rd annual Children's Safety Fair sponsored by Orem Community Hospital on Saturday.

The fair is designed to provide information on safety issues for parents and children, said Daron Cowley, Hospital Public Relations coordinator.

"We've had a lot of positive responses about the fair the past two years. It's fun for the kids and we teach parents how to continue their children's safety education at home," Cowley said.

The more than 30 attractions at the fair this year will include fingerprinting, blood typing, blood pressure checks, cholesterol screening, free first-aid kits and safety guides, a teddy bear clinic and a MASH dress-up contest.

Health and safety personnel from both Orem and Provo will present information on fire, electrical, water, bicycle safety, baby and pet safety, along with poisoning and drug abuse prevention. "Over 1,700 of the kids under 14 we treat each year in the emergency room involve the use of a product like bikes or skateboards," said Cowley.

Additionally, the Orem City police and fire departments, paramedics, and Utah Highway Patrol will be on hand with their vehicles for the children to see up close.

Hospital tours will include a look at an operating room complete with "patient" so that the children can become familiarized with a hospital environment should they ever need to use the facilities.

The fair will run Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 331 N. 400 West, Orem.

Expectations high for the BYU vs. Miami game

By KIMBERLY ROZIER
Universe Sports Writer

BYU football is back, and this year they have the opportunity to recapture their No. 1 title achieved in 1984.

The Cougars play Miami on Sept. 8 after opening against UTEP on Sept. 1. Miami has been pre-season ranked No. 1, paralleling the Pittsburgh game of 1984.

"Playing Pittsburgh six years ago really propelled us up in front of the Eastern press," BYU Assistant Head Coach Dick Felt said. "With the big win we got a lot of attention from those watching, and it gave the players a boost that helped carry them through the season undefeated.

"Miami could have the same type of effect. It certainly would propel us right off the back and leave it up to us to continue," Felt said.

The real challenge, Felt said, will be trying to prepare the players so they don't overlook UTEP in expectation of playing Miami.

"There is already so much hype over playing Miami most people think they are our first game," he said.

The No. 1 goal is always to win conference games. Felt said, "We try to take games one at a time and have done a decent job doing that over the years."

Felt said BYU's recruiting looks great on paper. "We've got a lot of new players that will really help down the road," he said.

However, quarterbacks have been an area of concern.

Other than Ty Detmer, "we just have new recruits. We don't have any set one who knows the system," Felt said. The cougars recruited two new freshmen quarterbacks, Brian Hancock and Brock Spencer. Felt said they also got Joe Evans, a transfer from Idaho State.

"Defensively we have our work cut out for us," Felt said. "We've got to get off to a good start. We'll have to get alive in a hurry." Felt said fortunately the cougars passing attack is compatible with Miami's.

The new recruits arrive on campus Monday. Official fall practice begins on Aug. 15.

Even though theft is down, students remain at high risk

By ANDREA CORBETT
Universe Staff Writer

Although residential burglaries in Provo have declined from 1988, students remain at a high risk, said a Provo Police Officer.

Capt. Duane Fraser of the Provo Police Department said home burglaries have declined 22 percent in the last two years. In 1988, there were 404 burglaries reported, while in 1989 there were 315.

"Despite this decrease in residential crime, citizens cannot become complacent," Fraser said. "Just because the numbers have decreased doesn't mean that you won't be burglarized."

"It doesn't matter how few people are victimized, if you are one of them, no one else matters," Fraser said.

Students are at a high risk for burglaries because they are always coming and going and don't always protect their belongings, Fraser said.

Students that live in apartment complexes are at a higher risk because of the high density population conditions, Fraser said.

"Apartment complexes have so many individuals coming and going that people cannot tell who is a resident and who isn't," he said.

Another opportunity for apartments to be burglarized is when a roommate loses a key, Fraser said. "When this happens, roommates don't lock the door and that is an invitation for anyone to walk in and take what they please," Fraser said.

"Students need to understand that just because someone is home doesn't mean that an intruder won't enter the apartment," Fraser said.

Several student complexes in Provo provide protection for their residents. Karen Cole, manager of Raintree Apartments, said Raintree Apartments provides a security guard that can always be found if there is a problem.

The complex also provides deadbolts and peepholes in each apartment, Cole said.

Liberty Square Apartments has also installed deadbolts and peepholes in each of the apartments.

Jeff Reed, an employee and resident of Branbury Park, said Branbury Park has a security officer that patrols the parking lot and the management has provided deadbolts and peepholes for each unit.

Branbury Park also circulates a newsletter that includes a self-protection and safety message, Reed said.

The best protection against burglary is common sense, said Fraser. "A lock or peephole is no good if it is not used."
